

PAUPERS MAY NOT, BUT HELPERS MAY BUY BAD WHISKEY

Commissioner Didn't Mean to Infringe on Workers' Constitutional Rights."

Charlton Kingsbury to-day learned who his vital helpers have been since stepping into office at the City Docks in Brooklyn and Bronx County, Staten Island. Several weeks ago, Kingsbury wrote to the Commissioner of Labor, asking him to inform him that paupers were not to be admitted "panhandled" in the neighborhood and came "home" there.

"Till you come out, nation keeper who sells whiskey, never even think to my paupers!" declared the Commissioner in a proclamation issued at that time.

A hospital helper is not a pauper. He is generally recruited from the Municipal and other judging houses. He doesn't get a tank President's salary, but he usually earns his modest monthly pittance.

"Let me have some whiskey—bourbon," said a hospital helper to one of the best known and most popular bartenders in Four Corners, Staten Island.

"Nix; you're a pauper Varnouse!" replied the bartender. "Want me put in jail? You're one of those Farm Colony guys."

"But I am not an inmate," argued the indignant and thirsty visitor.

"I'm a hospital helper and I have a constitutional right to get whiskey here. Hell, you refuse me I'll get a pint of cornhopper!"

"Every darn fool has a constitutional right to fill himself up with booze, even the kind we sell," said the popular bartender, "but that doesn't alter the law."

"You mean to tell me that I, a free born citizen of the United States, raised right here, with real money in my pocket—and sober—you admitted that, I'm denied the right to stake my thre."

"I'll give you a drink for nothing—that will be within the law, and this man Kingsbury can't say I'm selling it."

"No, sir; I'm not a panhandler," replied the hospital helper, and walked out.

Commissioner Kingsbury is worried over the situation created by his prohibition orders. It is understood he will give saloonkeepers the tip that

News Oddities

STRAW HATS were copied on the Atlantic City boardwalk.

BLACKSMITHS in Pittsburgh have got scythes and are advertising them now for mow pay, respectively.

VISITORS WORK FURRY at the outdoor May games of Caesar give in airy robes.

CABLE COMMUNICATION with Persia is open again, if any one wants to cable to Persia.

BILL OF MONEY picked up in the street and left with the World's Lost and Found Bureau has been claimed to date by eleven persons.

BUILDING BLAST has University of Michigan medical building and killed 125 visitors plus itself for observation because they were inoculated with various germs. Now the scientists are observing the building with more than mild interest.

PRESIDENT WILSON is getting as bad as Hitler that he has his infant grandchild as a great tool the cold made by the departure of Italy's Diaz.

He has no objection to the Japanese taking a drink with money they've earned.

VICTIM'S FINGERPRINTS ON KNIFE IN MYSTERY

FOR WIDOWS OF F-4'S MEN.

Society Women of Washington to Give Benefit Performance.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—A committee of young society women of this city will give a benefit performance at the Pabst Theatre May 18 for the widows and children of the men who were lost on the submarine F-4 at Honolulu.

The Marine Band will play and Lieut. C. N. Hinckley, U. S. N., will deliver an illustrated lecture on the submarine. Every feature will be a special offering. Manager Louis Powers offered the theatre to the committee free of charge. The admission price, all colored cotton shipboard will be furnished free, one of the members of the committee will furnish the tickets and advertising passes for the visitors and the Relief Fund, under the direction of Admiral Dewey, will attend to the distribution of the funds.

Admiral of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels and the heads of the various bureaus and their wives have agreed to set aside extra time for the performances. The committee in charge includes Mrs. James Lee Anderson, Chairman; Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. John Washington Davidge, Miss Minnie, Miss Downing, the Misses Fitch and Miss Nash.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dunham to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Putnam of No. 50 Willow Street, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret G. Putnam, to Lawrence Dunham. Mr. Dunham is the Third Deputy Police Commissioner of New York.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.

Walters broke down the door and found Bruno's body with three stab wounds in the abdomen. A carving knife lay near it.

Capt. Gildea of the Second Branch Bureau and its homicide unit went to the house to obtain fingerprints and make accurate measurements and photographs of the surroundings.

Coroner Feinberg, who, with Inspector Fauret, Assistant District Attorney Murphy and County Medical Examiner Schultz, attended the investigation, said he believed the man committed suicide. Marks on the knife fitted his fingerprints.